THE PROFESSOR'S WIFE.

By BERTHOLD AVERBACH.

(Translated from the German by GEO. GOSSMAN. A.M.)

boy roguishly, which meant to say:

if you tell on me you will be fined fifteen yards of buttermilk."

"Whom is it then?"
"Lorley, to be sure, good heavens! if I were not but thirteen years old, Lorley should be my little wife, but I have but five florins the inn, as pale as a corpse, and would not wages in the summer, a pair of nail-shod shoes, a pair of trousers and two shirts, that Lorley, I tell you she's a gay girl, by jolly, always appearing as though she came out of a glass-case, and works so steadily too,, and she's got such a queer look that one hardly knows whether to speak to her or not, and such true eyes, it always makes me happy to see her, the seldom speaks a word, and yet one tech as though she had an order for everylody, and when she does say something, it makes a person feel as though one ought to go through a fire for her; one can't do

Reinhard looked at the lad with a confused mien, so the latter, bracing his hands in his sides challengingly said: "What's wrong? What do you want?"

Nothing, nothing, just "Yes, just go on; here is your groschen again, if you are going to make a fool of me, and I aint going on at all, not a bit of it I won't do it. Reinhard pacified the boy who was endeavoring to work himself into a passion, he gave him another groschen, it produced a good result. As soon as the likeness was finished and Reinhard had gone away, the boy yelled out with a clear voice, so that the cows hold-ing their grazed fodder in their mouths turned about to look at him. The boy immediately seated himself on the ground and began to examine the device and inscription of the two groschen with an air of satisfaction, then he drew out a little leather purse, fastened to a button-hole, in which there were already a kreuzer and a half, smiling, he put in his acquisition, and closing it with a twist exclaimed: "Now behave yourself."

Whilst this was transpiring in the forest, the Collaborator was experiencing other things in the village.

He made a visit to the school-master, and found him an emaciated man, making sad complaints how his vocation required so much freshness and energy, and how bitter want was oppressing him, so that he was obliged to confess to himself that he was not

The Collaborator gave him two florins, which he might apply at his option, to make the pupils a pleasure with, if he liked, but expressly forbace him to buy books with it.

Opposite the new church, on the building stones, sat a man far advanced in years, asking alms of the Collaborator. After interrogating him as to his circumstances, the old man said that, in reality, the parish had to keep him, and that it had sent his meals to his house, but that he had accepted of them but twice; that he could not bear seeing how his seven grand-children were starving about him, whilst he was satiating himself.

The masons standing about him confirmed these declarations. The Collaborator acthe misery he witnessed there weighed so perience a feeling of suffocation; he gave them-all that was still left him, he would gladly give his life to assist the poor. For a long time he sat in his room in deepest sadness, at last he applied himself to his task of tuning the piano. A long time after dinner Lorley came to him, and although she had resolved to herself to appear distant toward the "bookworm," she could not. For to a person of feeling there is no heavier burden than that of cherishing a past impropriety or displeas-ure in the soul. Lorley had a full right of being on good terms with him again.

"Now you see how Mr. Reinhard is," said she, "when he's away from home, one must often keep his dinner warm for him until four o'clock; he isn't choicy, that's true, he is content with everything as it is, but it makes one feel bad to think that all these good things 'Let us,' that is, we will make man. Now are spoiled in cooking, and one can't take nature neither speaks nor wills, but we speak teach the birds your title if you do not keep them off the fire either, and, Mr. Rienmaier, I and will, and are therefore in continual strife have also been thinking a good deal, about and ntagonism with ourselves." you, you said something so nice yesterday and then you explained it so well, now you beggar's knapsack despair on the wall," fi-

"Why, that about aiding the mothers. Go to the minister, he'll help you get it in or-

"You are right, I shall go now."
"Yes," said Lorley, "after a meal is just the best time to speak to the minister, and you'll have a better apperite yourself after loing such a good act."

The Collaborator found the minister in his The Collaborator found the minister in his large chair smoking his pipe and taking his coffee. After the usual formalities of greeting, the matter was introduced; the minister calmly sipped his coffee to the bottom of his cup, and then went on to explain to the stranger that the plan was impracticable—people would naturally assist each other of their own accord.

The Collaborator replied as to its not being the case, and that benevolence must be brought under organization to give mankind brought under organization to give mankind fresh impulses. The minister rose and with a slight motion of the hand said: "that the visionary schemes of uncalled for interferers were not needed here."

Now the Collaborator recalled to mind the poverty and want to which he had been an eye-witness but a few hours ago; growing warmer, he exclaimed: "I cannot understand how you can ascend the pulpit and preach, when you know that people leave your church that will suffer of hunger, whilst you are seated at a sumptuous table."

The minister turning about with an air of contempt remarked; that he did not cherish such demagogueism-he was yet of the old "Barbara, I suppose," said Reinhard.
"No, she isn't the one by a good way, but heresy—and that it was scarcely worthy of being noticed with contempt. He made a bow of withdrawal, and then added: "Tell bow of withdrawal, and then added withdrawal, and the withdr your friend to stop his song propogandism, or the matter will be attended to by the police. Adieu."

The Collaborator returned to Reinhard, at shoes, a pair of trousers and two shirts, that would scarcely be enough for a dowry. But his visit, he replied in a ruffled way: "I'm a Lorley, I tell you she's a gay girl, by jolly, fool;" then he again pressed his quivering lips and was silent.

Reinhard extended his sketch-book to Lorley, asking: "Who is that?"

"Why, that's Wendelin, let me have it, I.

want to show it to Barbara.' "No, I cannot part with that book." "Why? is anybody's likeness in it I daren't see?"

"Perhaps." Lorley withdrew her hands from the sketch-book.

During the walk, which the two friends now took together, the Collaborator poured out his whole heart.

Reinhard blamed his proceedings, to which misery, you only look for and retain that which is beautiful.'

'Yes, nor do I wish to realize them until I have learned, by some miracle or other, how to aleviate the ills of mankind."

"Oft times, I cannot understand," proceeded the Collaborator, "how it is possible for me to be happy but for a single hour, when I know that there are innumerable beings with the same rights to an existence that I have, are cursing and lamenting their lives because of the most pitiful sufferings for want of meat and drink, that very hour.

The two walked silently and leisurely through the mountain forest. An old man, who was carrying a fagot of dry wood on his back, met them; the Collaborator stopped, and looking after him, said: "That instinct which we have in common with the lowest of human kind, is after all, of greatest service to-us. Without it we would be vanquished in our battles with the world. For a wise purpose it has been implanted by God in all animate beings, and especially in man. Did you observe how the old man walked stoopingly along in bearing up his load? He knows nothing of the organization of his body; knows nothing about the center of gravity and the plumb-line, and yet he bears his burden in complete conformity to the laws of physics-perhaps all men bear their burdens by some impulse of nature, which we have not yet recognized as a law." On this mourners-bench did the Collaborator endeavor to free himself of his cares; he did not succeed, but still it was a relief, he could breathe more freely now, was now open to new impressions.

Reinhard fell upon the proper way of redeeming his friend; in the midst of the forest, he struck up Weber's "Riraro! the Summer,

The Collaborator immediately accompanied him with a vigorous bass. They repeatcompanied the old man to his house; and ed the strophes several times, and such a song does wonders in a troubled soul longing heavily upon his soul that he seemed to ex- for freedom; its notes supply the spirit with pinions to raise itself far above the world.

"There is no higher hold-no more certain enjoyment than that afforded us by nature," reiterated the Collaborator; "I think that enjoy in nature. Thanks to her that she lives on measuredly and silently, and that she never sees or speaks to us only when our minds become a part of her self. Just think, what a confusion, could we change the whole order of nature by our theories, sophisms and stunned, but finally got over it by way of an contradictions; if she were obliged to sport easy jest. However, from that time on he in conformity to our notions of things; to experiment on our ideas-how unfortunate we would be! There may be a deep significance in the fact, that, in accordance with the teachings of the Bible, God created the world by the word, and without an expressed will, but when man was created. He said:

And connect them with ties, And when I'm pleased here no more I will climb to the skies. Hui-dee-day, etc.

"I'm not from the highlands, I'm not from the plain, But bound to be jolly Be it sunshine or rain.

"We are three jolly comrades Always in for a mix And are known through the country As 'regular bricks.'

"Among my companions -I'm the youngest of three, There's a sweet-heart for each, But the finest for me.

"And a little, little house, And a little, little bed, With a bonny, bonny lad, Or I never shall be wed

"My love is called Peter Full of mirth and of glee, And I am his darling Am as merry as he."

With such popular melodies, which Reinhard knew by the dozens, did he inundate his friend, whenever he fell into his trifling enquiries; for, as soon as the Collaborator began to rack his brains about something, Reinhard struck up another air, to which the Collaborator could not forbear taking the second voice.

They both returned home in good spirits, and did not observe that people were putting their heads together and whispering to one another about something.

The next morning Reinhard stood at the Collaborator's bed saying: "Up now! you're going along with me on a few day's trip among the hills; it will freshen up the blood again, I cannot work anyway; nothing affords me any more pleasure."

The Collaborator was soon ready, and now in spite of his resolve to bathe himself as much as possible in the simple life of the village—all was no ready to take another

The two friends passed many a life-inspring sunny day, on their tours together; and like the sky that unfolded its unclouded blue over them, so a pure unclouded sympathy now expended itself over their united existence. What one did or proposed was satisfactory and desirable to the other, contentions about trifles were not indulged in, better hand. Hence it is only natural that may be refused on very slight pretence. satisfactory and desirable to the other, conand so every drink and morsel enjoi to realize to yourself the needs of want and plied a new reasoning, every resting-place double refreshment.

As a matter of course, the Collaborator was always the most complacent, but it did not proceed from any obligation to submission, but rather from an immediate joyful esobservations on any subjects brought to his notice, he once said: "What a pleasant thing special prayers and inscriptions are always" it is that we can be together from morning till night, I often like to be alone with nature. but when some person is near me, there is still greater bliss, for I then unconsciously harbor a feeling that I am not only in unity and peace with nature, but with all mankind; or at least ought to be.

Reinhard now gave his friend a sturdy pat on the shoulder, he would gladly have pressed him to his bosom, but this expression of also cites passages from the Hebrew of the his sympathies he deemed as being more appropriate and manly. They now entered a locality highly noted for its geological importance. The Collaborator forgot, for a season, all the human ills he says preferred to give the preeminent benewith which he had burdened his mind for he found many rare specimens among the quarries; not only did he pick up a coprolite of unusual completeness, in one of the limestone pits, but also many other singular curiosities. Picking up several fine specimens of petrified fish teeth he expressed his peculiar views as to having relics in hand, from a past age, and at least a thousand years older than our earth. Reinhard gladly listened to all such opinions for he was here introduced into the history of our World's origin.

The Collaborator was fond of illustrating his assertions with comical applications, and how this globe must have "failed passing an examination" until the doctor, man, was

He often repeated that Geology was the only science to which he could apply himself out of preference, and was especially attached to it from the fact, as he remarked that Astronomy had lifted the roof from old-style Orthodoxy, and that Geology had drawn the platform from under her feet.

The Collaborator's pockets got too full, so that he was obliged to leave many a fine petrification behind, the finding of which had given him much pleasure; by way of amends, he amused himself in secreting them in uneven love cannot equal the nameless bliss we usual places; with childlike satisfaction he would then graphically describe how some bungler would write a learned treatise on these extraordinary phenomena. Reinhard remarked that in doing this, he had confused scientific investigation, he was easy jest. However, from that time on he left every specimen that he could not take with him, at its place. As long as are natural sciences were spoken of, Reinhard willingly gave ear, but when the world's evils were again made the theme, he began to chant: "Collaborator, Collaborator, ye trees, ye stones, ye birds, the Collaborator is here, he wishes to deliver you a sermon ! Now I'll silent."

To one thing, however, Reinhard listened with a special delight. They were sitting

"What?"

"Why that about aiding the mothers. Go spirit rears itself from among the throng of

"Certainly, how happy the possessor of a handsome human countenance is, it elicits a triendly smile from everybody, and every look that is directed toward it, is cheered up, a reflected ray of satisfaction is returned it again from all.

Both thought of Lorley, but neither of them mentioned her name.

Once speaking about love, Reinhard ob-served; "It often occurs to me as though all this singing and saying of love were nothing but an idle tradition. For my part I cannot imagine to myself that peculiar bliss, in which a person is literally devoured of love." Reinhard made this observation, as though t were but a tradition to him, from season of by-gone loneliness; there was no more truth in it for him, and yet he repeated it out of habit; his friend may have felt this, for he gave him an expressive but sad look, and then replied: "Such a maiden is like a song, that a remote poet had composed, and to which another has discovered an appropriate melody, which now reveals its meaning in a hundred ways."

TOBY ROSENTHALS LATEST MASTERPIECE.

The following criticism of this picture by a well-known German writer, J. Theodore Schutz, will be read with interest at the pres-

We have already in our last report called attention to the fact that our artists, with the material at hand, are steadily improving, and are so successful in their undertakings that they will very soon and are now fairly on the road to equal if not excel the greatest painters of any age. Toby Rosenthal's last work, "The Trial of Constance de Beverly," which caused us to wield our pen to-day, is positive proof of our assertion. The artist, American born, nevertheless belongs to our Munich school, studied under Piloty, and through a long series of powerfully executed paintings of the warmest sentimentality and poetical conception has earned a name and reputation which can only be heightened through the coexistent, namely, in so far as the technique is in its widest sense brought into consideration.

The picture is masterly composed, excellently drawn, and the colors handled in a most artistic manner. The scene represented is shown under the lights of torches; so true is it that we are really impelled to look around and convince ourselves that no lamp is shedding its light upon it. Also in its spiritual outlook would it be effective did it not need a commentary, were it not an illustration, in fact a poem, which, although well known thirty years past, has hardly a votary among our world. Of course, this is not the case in America, for which this picture is in But the indispensible attribute of an historical picture, viz: that it should be self-explanatory, this one lacks. Self-explanatory it is not. One who does not understand the poem must not only err as to the circumstances which led the two convicted victims before the judge to be sentenced, but he can very easily draw such wrong conclusions as would bitterly wrong the heroine of this

Constance de Beverly, through Marmion's love misled, escaped from the convent, and for three years, under the disguise of a page, with full knowledge of the sacrifice she brought to her lover, accompanied him with extreme humiliation, and now finds herself betrayed and deceived. The man she held in such high esteem she discovers to be one who, for the sake of gain, stoops to false-hood and deceit, breaks his faith with her, and would make, against her will, and merely on account of her riches, his own the bride of a brave man whom he hunts to death.

This embitters her life and drives her to desperation. She listens to the proposition of a rogue, who promises to poison her rival, and the cowardice of this miserable wretch results in bringing them both before this terrible tribunal illustrated in this magnificent work.

In a vaulted chamber, deep under ground reign these three judges; seated upon stone chairs the abbot of St. Cuthbert, blind from age, the abbess of St. Hilda and the prioress of Tynemouth compose this terrible college the rules of the holy Benedictines as the only law book lying on an iron table before them. Splendidly did the artist characterize these ngures. As hard as the stone around him is the old man; severity, inexorable severity, speaks in every line of the countenance and form of the old prioress, and only the abbes shows that there is any fellow-feeling of pity alive in her breast. And the accused; she interests us most, awakens our deepest sympathy, while that wretch, who with fear crouches upon the ground, is most repulsive, and can only operate to make us abhor and despise him. But Constance, not for one moment doubting her inevitable doom, evinces incomparable firmness of character.

"And there she stood so calm and pale, That, but her breathing did not fail, And motion slight of eye and head, And of her bosom, warranted That neither sense nor pulse she lacks, You might have thought a form of wax, Wrought to the very life, was there So still she was, so pale, so fair."

With the finest feeling and sentimentality did our great artisticharacterize and illustrate the very moment when the rough and rude monk tears from her her cloak. How she shrinks in real womanly modesty to be exposed in her page's dress to the inquisitive gaze of those around her. We admit that we realize in this figure a master-liece of the highest rank—our whole sympathy flies to-ward that most unfortunate girl: and the artist has won!

The dreadful surroundings, which the artist had to create to ludicate the end—the horror nad to create to ludicate the end—the horror of being immured alive—we will pass over with slighting glace, although they form, in their completeness and gloom, one of the great features of this great painting. We, like the poet, will refrain from dwelling too long with the terrible, which only superstitious fanaticism could invent and suggest. But the picture of Constance will be indelibly imprinted upon the mind of every beholder. imprinted upon the mind of every beholder. If the artist would have interpreted Walter Scott more freely, and if circumstances have permitted him to free himself entirely from illustration, then we would have ranked this among the greatest works of art this age has produced.

תנוכח (first day) .....Saturday, December 13 מבת היח מבת Thursday, Friday, Dec. 18, 19 במבת במבת December 28 A third B'nai B'rith Lodge has been established in Berlin, Germany, under the name of "Montefiore."

A librarian, puzzled how to catalogue a Hebrew book, described it as one "the beginning of which is at the end."

THE Thanksgiving Proclamation of Presi dent Arthur and Governor Cleveland, are commended as models of brevity and good CARLYLE, the dyspeptic pessimist, had a great aversion for the Jews and wanted to be King John and apply the pincers to them. But he was very polite in declining the honors offered him by Disraeli.

RABBI Alphabetical Browne of New York never gets enough notoriety. He was one of the delegation of ministers that waited on Blaine during the campaign, and catches it hearts, I went to the Rosenthal Exhibition, for mingling in the filthy pool.

THE fact, generally known and credited here, than John Jacobs of impecunious status in this city, has inherited an immense sum from an English relative, is mentioned with an exclamation point by the Jewish Messenger as a "statement" taken from the Israelit of Mayence.

THE " Montefiore Chair of Sacred Liter ature" was duly established in the Hebrew Union College on the 1st inst. The scene is reported to have been one of much interest. Rev. Dr. Zirndorf delivered the oration, Rev. Dr. Wise called the Almighty to witness the event, and Rev. Dr. Mielziner delivered a pertinent prayer.

THE question whether the Hebrew alphabet in the time of the Patriarchs had twentytwo letters as at present, or only sixteen is recommended as a live subject for the consideration of our societies of Jewish young men. They might also discuss the syllables in the Hebrew language, the Aramaic tongue, the cry of charity cannot melt. Yes, I like the Sayings of the Fathers and other familiar this painting better in the first place because

A delegation from the Vineland colony are visiting some of the Eastern cities, trying to get work for the colonists to keep the wolf from the door during the coming winter. from Tennysons "Idylls of the King," there They have twenty sewing machines and might have been scope for a grander painting could earn some money making shirts, draw- in the Guineveres and Viviens than in the mense collection of learning, imagination and Jewish Ex-Lord Mayor, who has been alder. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gerstle, Miss Gerstle, ers, etc. With true American adaptability "Lily Maid of Astolat." But in Constance they are willing to turn from farmers into factory hands. A conference is contemplated the carper might say. But leaving out all to aid them in this emergency.

Is it because Necessity knows no Law. that Michael Davis of Melbourne, who had situation. Constance doesn't seem much been for several months soliciting and re- like one of the solemn sisterhood, who have ceiving pecuniary assistance from Jewish either kept or broken vows, in her page's citizens there, and obtained $75 at various dress, more like a modern actress, perhaps times from the Hebrew Society, brought suit and the face of anguish might pass for the against the President for slander, because he said "I consider you are an imposter." The clean-chiseled cast of countenance suggest Judge non-suited the plaintiff and said he an American model rather than the brawny was very much of the President's opinion.

THE London Jewish papers have sixteenpage supplements containing the details of reality of life. There is a sufficiency of light, the Montefiore celebrations in England and at least in the morning hours, to relieve the on the Continent. All were joyful beyond comparison. At Ramsgate everybody took paintings of a masterly type. Having heard part in the procession, and Sir Moses was so much in praise of the picture, it was an much touched by the telegrain from the agreeable surprise not to find oneself disap-Queen. He received 620 telegrams and 850 letters on that day. His life by Lucien Wolf "Affection's Last Offering," pleases me far has just been issued by the Harpers in the better than "The Joys and Sorrows of popular Franklin Square Library form.

A NEW company of the First Regiment of the Illinois National Guards being in process thal's style and too commonplace in its of formation in Chicago, sixteen men were enrolled out of the fifty required. Four of them were Jews, and were duly accepted. But in the course of a few days some German officer, of anti-Semitic proclivities and this master excels, such as "The Empty memories, raised an objection and notice Chair," the "Departure from Home," etc. was given them to quit. But Mr. Julius Silversmith, of the Occident, waited on the Colonel commanding, explained the situation and he ordered his adjutant to reinstate the four Jewish recruits, but these resigned in turn. And this is progressive America.

An illustration of the occurrences very common in Russia, is given by one of the refugees now in this country. A young and fidelity in all the accessories. With the rapidity of lightning a mob gathered that were ready to lynch all Jews; but sets, etc. But in a scene from the past you fortunately the liberal postmaster of the city hurried to the scene, and after many efforts have an embodied memory or reproduction succeeded in preventing bloodshed and plunder; the girl was arrested and acknowledged

THE report of the President of the Mound come an expert in this direction, for I believe imitate the example of those who style themselves modern Rabbis?

THE latest idea of the English philanthropists is to send over all the Jewish refugees and emigrants from Roumania and elsewhere to Philadelphia. They have so far received the cold shoulder in New York, but a warm welcome in the City of Brotherly Love. Nevertheless the Record of the latter place protests aginst any wholesale forwarding, as they can find work for only a limited way of caring for those who not only cannot but will not care for themselves. The same journal makes happy hits at those who deliver memorial orations and compare the late Dr. Huebsch, for instance, to the Prophet Elijah, besides making all sorts of and unassuming as a child. His face is of absurd exaggerations.

A PEEP AT ROSENTHAL'S PICTURES

Like all the world and his wife, not to speak of his sisters, cousins, aunts and sweetabout the best advertised collection of pictures that ever was offered to the public on this Coast, and "all for the small sum of a quarter of a dollar," as the North Beach showman used to say. No wonder it drew crowds, when the newspapers were filled with most hibition," which was no doubt used in the ingenious black-type advice to see the pictures, and "take your opera glass," while art bring woe to the Republican party. The notes and local items told of nothing else.

Of course there were plenty who came but to see and be seen, not to speak of flirting maidens and cooing couples, and those who came to talk instead of looking, and make remarks highly edifying to their neighbors, as they display the densest ignorance of the object of their visit, or the frivolity which cannot tell it is in the wrong place. But most were attentive observers and liked the painting. My verdict is that "Constance" is Toby's masterpiece, but this may be because don't care as much for "Elaine" as the rest of folks, and don't mind Mrs. Johnson keeping it all to herself, perhaps for fear thieves would again cut it from the frame, or perhaps from that pride of sole ownership which even it has more figures and greater contrast of light and shade; something else besides the dead steered by the dumb, the maiden not ideal enough and the servitor quite too grim and gloomy. In fact, while taking a subject we have monks and nuns, -and nothing else, the greater personages, who can forget the fat, ruddy, jolly-faced priest who doesn't seem a bit disturbed by the gravity of the crisis of the drama. The slight figure and beauty of the Middle Ages, or the subdued features of the nuns in chief, who like the abbot stand out from the canvas with the sombre colors which usually characterize pointed. Rosenthal's first picture of note, Spring," which seems an echo of the other, or the "Seminary Alarmed," which is almost too gay in its coloring for an artist of Rosentheme. As for the "Exile's Return," we would prefer to see the wanderer's face There are copies or photographs of several other pictures of the domestic school in which Then there is the celebrated chromo of the boy climing the orchard wall, with the owner above and the dog below, which under the title "Out of the Frying Pan into the Fire," has the greatest popularity with the masses; and "Mother is Out," while the mice of children are playing and setting things topsyturvy; but I like best the Bach Family at Home,—there is animation in all the figures

But I am afraid too much to the German fireside school, and does not step enough into the life of nations and the wide world for subjects not to be found in the homes of the Fatherland, or the crypts of mediaeval monasteries. This is, however, merely the suggestion of an admirer for the next venture of the artist. Of course this exhibition has revived the interest felt in Scott has received criticism and ridicule for publishing the letters received by Rosenthal. They are said to show that the artist is too number, and cannot perform miracles in the proud of his work, -but with the exception of Shakespeare, who was so careless of his own fame, genius believes in itself, or it would falter in its flights. In company it is admitted that the artist is modest to a fault, and in private life I know that he is simple a blonde, poetic type and shows nothing marked to indicate his Jewish origin. But for all that Israel claims him and is proud of the race. UNA.

> PASSOVER WINE AND INVESTI-GATING PHYSICIANS.

We have received from Dr. R. H. McDonald, of Vinegar Bitters, Pacific Bank, and Cold Water fame, a "Hand Book of Prolate campaign to swell St. John's vote and Hebrews, being a temperate race (at least those of the old school) do not take much stock in measures of repression whereby men may be forced to abstain from the cup that inebriates. So we were not particularly interested in the indictment of liquor as one of the "twin evils" until we ran across a discussion of Bible wines and particularly an article by Dr. Norman Kerr, Honorable Secretary to the Habitual Drunkards' Legislation Society and the Dalrymple Inebriate Home England, and Honorable Member of the Amer. National Association for the Prevention of Insanity. And despite all these titles, he still lives! His discourse on Passover Wine is rather interesting to an Israelite, who knows all about it. Here is what the enemy of strong drink writes: It has been argued, on the one hand, that all ferment was ordered to be excluded from the Passover, and that, therefore, alcoholic liquor is an unlawful Paschal element; and on the other, that unfermented wine which has been solve this problem from Talmudic, or indeed from any other sources. I therefor have felt it my duty to avoid all speculation as to the original scope of the prohibition with refer-

I have a number of Jewish patients who generally use intoxicating wine on this occasion, but who sometimes, for convenience sake, use intoxicating wine, they believe both to be allowable. 3. I know of others who use wine fermented, but not intoxicating of much the same alcoholic strength as ginger beer. 4 A number of my Jewish patients use only in. toxicating wine, which has been duly authorized and stamped as fit for Passover use. 5. examined a specimen of Passover wine sanctioned by the Chief Rabbi of Holland, and found it to contain one and one-half pre feel grateful—one of the many indications of cent of alcohol; in other words it was not intoxicating wine. 6. My own conclusion, from an exhaustive research, that intoxicating and non-intoxicating grape and raisin wine are equally lawful at the Passover, is confirmed by the public attestation of the heads of the two great sections of Jews in the British Empire,-the orthodox and the reformed -my learned friend, Dr. Herman Adler, delegate Chief Rabbi, and Professor Marks of the Chair of Hebrew in London Univer-

Finally the Doctor deduces the conclusion that the founder of his faith, being a Jew, may have drank unfermented wine at the last supper, and so the water drinkers may be happy in their abstinence from intoxicating beverages.

SMYRNA.-On the latest birthday of the Sultan, a pleasing spectacle was witnessed in the streets of Smyrna. SIR BENJAMIN PHILLIPS.

The movement which has been started to commemorate the lengthy connection of Sir Benjamin Phillips, with the corporation of the city of London, is one that must prove as gratifying to the Anglo-Jewish community will American Judaism be in the next twenty Rosenthal will yet give us something in the as to the worthy alderman, whom his fellowcitizens propose now to honor with a memorial of their esteem and appreciation. For more than thirty years Sir Benjamin has been one of the most prominent of a circle of representative citizens, which has included among its numbers some of the ablest men who have ever occupied the chair of Chief Magistrate of the City of London, the second British Jew who held that historic the personality of the artist, and Irving M. office. He filled the post of Sheriff more than a quarter of a century ago, and has the privilege, sufficiently infrequent to deserve more than passing notice, of seeing his son, Mr. George Faudel Phillips, hold the same position while himself still a member of the aldermanic body. A more appropriate time than the present could scarcely have been chosen for recording in some shape, the services rendered to the municipality by our eminent co-religionist as Alderman, Magistrate and citizen. The memorial, as we announced, will take the form of a bust to be placed in the Guildhall among the "civic him whose name and fame reflects honor on fathers," who have earned the thanks of the enjoyable affair indeed. corporation and the esteem of their fellowcitizens.

Few of the present generation are sufficiently sensible of the debt of gratitude which we, as British Jews, owe to Sir Benjamin Phillips, and to his predecessor in the mayoralty, Sir David Salomons, for the courageous part they took in the struggle for lewish of London, and the fruits of which we, without any effort, are now enjoying to the full. In spite of the historic liberalism of the corporation, in spite of the support which the majority of the citlzens of London extended to the champions of Jewish freedom in the Council Chamber of the Guildhall, the difficulties which beset a Jew who, like Sir Benjamin, sought to fill a municipal office, thirty or forty years ago, was far from contemptible. He was perforce in the very van and front of the struggle for emancipation. He had to resist pressure from behind, and resistance n front. Envy and uncharitableness he had to live down; he had to rise superior to taunt and gibe, and that process, not unfamiliar to us of late, the speering down of honestly achieved success. There are probably few who remember how David Salomons was abused in the year 1836, when he was nominated Sheriff. "Is it fit?" was the cry of the and a host of others. noisy opponent of our co-religionist, "that a Jew should have the hanging of a Christian?" and this was placarded throughout the city. provoking only the counter question, "Is it honor of Senator and Mrs. J. P. Jones, at purified by the fermentation having been fit that Christians should do things that their residence, 1500 Van Ness avenue. Becompleted, is lawful. As the Talmud was merit hanging?" Indeed, when we read of a sides the host and hostess and honored written in a dead language, and is an im- proposal to commemorate the services of a guests, the following sat down to the table : detail, I have found it quite impossible to man for a quarter of a century, and see in Mr. E. E. Lilienthal, Mr. J. L. Lilienthal, one week a Jewish Sheriff retiring from office and another member of our community tak. The decorations were in good taste and an ing his place, it becomes difficult to realize elegant dinner was partaken of. that within the memory of an ex-sheriff, now ence to lhe ferment, and confine myself to an living, Sir Moses Montefiore, David Saloinquiry into the actual facts of Jewish law mons fought in vain for the privilege of acting as "watchman", in the city of London, as Christian citizens did, and protested against have scrupulously avoided intoxicating wine being incapacitated as a Jew and having to pay instead of so acting.

Truly times have changed in the city of London since David Salomons sought the suffrages of his fellow-citizens, and Moses Montefiore paid twelve hundred pounds for one of the dozen medals-no more were granted-which enabled him to act as a broker within the city liberties. And the movement now on foot to commemorate the services of another of our Anglo-Jewish veterans, Sir Benjamin Phillips, is a pleasing sign of the change that has taken place. True, it is only one among many for which the Anglo-Jewish Community have reason to that tolerance and good-will which has ever been manifested toward the Jew in the day synagogues of England, the raisin wine being of his trouble by the most ancient corporation of the kingdom. But the proposal to place a memorial of the Alderman of Farrington in the Guildhall Chamber comes no less as a recognition of his public spirit and civic worth. It is a tribute to the citizen and to the man, not to the Jew; and that the man whom his fellow-citizens delight to honor on this occasion, should be a member of our community, is at once a source of pleasure and pride to the entire body of English Jews .- Jewish World.

> SWITZERLAND.—The Swiss Society for declared in public meeting that the Jewish system of slaughtering animals is accompanied by cruelty. The Society has further determined that strong efforts shall be made to cause a general prohibition of Schechita in Switzerland. Should the agitation prove successful, Jews will either have to become vegetarians, or they will have to eat the flesh of animals which have not been killed according to Jewish rites. In a few places the prohibition is already in force.

THE death is announced at Strasburg, the age of eighty-three, of M. Waldteufel, the composer. He was best known as a composer of waltzes, and as the Director of the Orchestra at the balls given at the French Court during the Third Empire. His son M. Emile Waldteufel, who is also a well of fact, embellished with fancy's fond touches, which played the Turkish National airs. The known composer, survives him. A Powerful Remeny —While so many deceptive decoctions are advertised as remedies, there is occasionally some article brought on the Market, which is bona fide what it purports to be. One of the latter class is Dr. Henley's Celery, Beef and Iron, manufactured by Tuthill, Cox & Co., at 537 Clay St. The three components of this remedy from the tonic for the blood, food for the brain, strengthens the nerves, and forms a nutritive and invigorator of the entire system. Well-known chemists and medical men attest the value of the preparation, and the thousands who have been benefited by it give the the best teatimony of its worth. All those suffering from ailments of the nerves and heart' headache and loss of strength should not fail to make daily use of this powerful remedy. A POWERFUL REMEDY.—While so many decep this powerful remedy.

Those who desire to secure strictly kosher beef. veal. mutton, etc., etc., should deal with Mr, K. Werthemier, 46 Washington Market. His meats are of the finest quality and sold at the lowest prices. All orders delivered free.—We take great pleasure in personally recommending the above firm to our readers, and assuring them that they can be sure of getting strictly Kosher meat at the establishment of Mr. K. Wertheimer 46 Washington Market.

The undersigned take pleasure in informing the public hat they have just opened at 209 Post street, above Tailors' and Dressmaking Trimming Establishment, with a full assortment and most complete choice of every article belonging to the line.

Having both of us been connected for years with the most important cloth and Trimming wholesale houses in this city, we can assure our patrons that we shall use our rounwledge to the best of their interests by supplying them with the best of geods for the cheapest price possible and our constant efforts shall always be to satisfy our superior over the constant of the content of the constant of the content our constant efforts shall always be to satisfy our superior.

We take pleasure to call the attention of our readers to the new Real Estate and House Brokers firm, Samuel and Wright, which has opened an office at 321 Montgomery street, corner of Sumner. Both of the gentlemen composing the firm are wellknown and respected in our community, and all those of our readers wishing to buy or sell real estate of any description, or wish to have their property taken care of, rents collected, loans negotiated, etc., will find it to their benefit to entrust their business to Samuel & Wright.

CLOAKS AND SUITS.

Our lady readers should not fail to read the advertisement in another column, of Mr. Fratinger, 105 Kearny street, the leading suit and cloak firm of our city. The great facilities possessed by Mr. Fratinger, enables him to sell superior and fashionable goods at less prices than any other house in the city.

GRAY'S MUSIC STORE.

In another column will be found the card of M. Gray, the proprietor of the largest music store in the city at 206 Post St. Our musical circles owe a great deal to the enterprise of Mr. Gray, who has done much to advance art among us. He is the agent for Steinway, Kranich, Bach and C. Roenisch pianos, and the Burdet, Domestic, and Wilcox & White organs. His stock of sheet music and music books is also the most complete and extensive in the city, and comprises the latest and standard musical composition. Musical instruments of every description will also be found at Gray's Music Store.

ELITE THEATRE.—The entertainment now offered free of charge at this theatre is surely the best of all popular places of amusements in town. Under the admirable management of the popular proprietor, Mr. Adolf Bail, none but the very best artists make their appearance here, while, at the same time, the refreshments are of the very best. Don't forget the direction, N. W. corner Dupont and Geary streets.
